

A new collection of lamps by Cassina for a complete and homely atmosphere

Cassina launches its first collection of lamps to enhance and complete its living and dining settings. The collection triggers a harmonious dialogue between the products and their surrounding space, offering simple and versatile solutions. Inspired by 1950s forms and motifs, these floor and suspension lamps are the synthesis of the thorough research of pure and ancestral forms, merging into a post-modern style that has been transported into the present.

Ficupala, with its eclectic style that drifts between post-modernism and art deco, recalls the organic forms of plants.

Elettra is inspired by the old coils from the first power stations and the old science fiction films that confided in the progress and technology of the future.

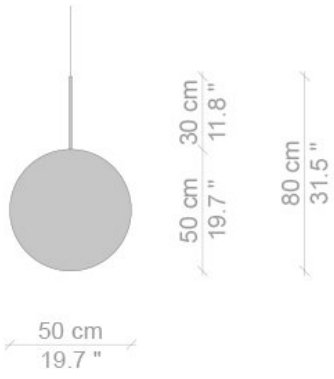

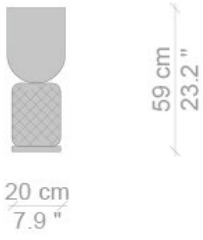

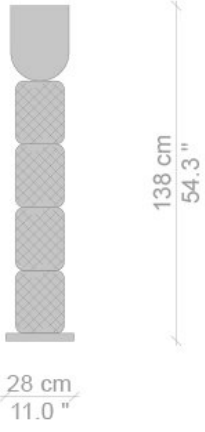

Singapore Sling, on the other hand, recalls the atmosphere of colonial times and the Venetian glass workmanship tradition with shapes inspired by exotic fruits.

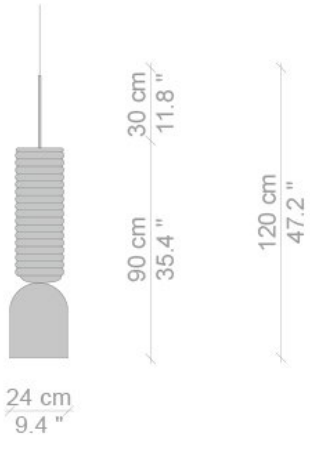

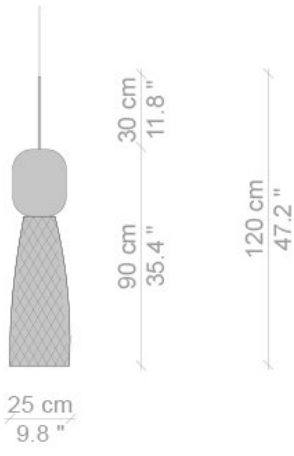

Bollicosa continues this tradition with the classic artisanal blown-glass sphere emphasising its characteristic bubble-shaped surface, the effect is reminiscent of a fossil where the air bubbles created give a rough and opaque effect transforming the glass from transparent to material.
